PREFATORY NOTE

DR. SAMUEL A. JONES

SAMUEL ARTHUR JONES was born of Welsh ancestry in Manchester, England, June 11, 1834. His parents emigrated to America in 1842 and settled in Central New York. The boy was prepared for college at the Utica Free Academy, and, later, read Medicine in Utica with Dr. W. H. Watson. In 1860 he was graduated M.D. from the Missouri Homœopathic Medical College, at St. Louis. He then proceeded to Philadelphia and in 1861 was graduated at the Homœopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania. In 1862 he entered the United States Service as First Assistant Surgeon of the Twenty-second New Jersey Infantry. Later, he was Assistant Surgeon of the Twenty-second Regiment of the New York State National Guard. In 1865 he was Secretary of the American Microscopical Society of New York. In 1870 he became Professor of Histology in the New York Homœopathic Medical College and in 1872 a member of the New York State Board of Medical Examiners. In 1875 he was called to Ann Arbor to organize the newly founded Homœopathic Medical College of the University of Michigan, where he served as Dean and Professor for the next five years. On his resignation of this position, he took up the active practice of medicine in Ann Arbor, where he continued to reside for the remainder of his life—a period of more than thirty years.

It was during this final period that he found leisure for enriching his private library and indulging in the literary activities so dear to him. The subjects most congenial to his mind were those which had to do with the great issues of life—ethical, social, religious. Of an ardent and sympathetic temperament, and an independent and aggressive spirit, he was instinctively drawn to those authors who gave voice to his own soul in a great way. For a number of years Carlyle took the first place; then by a natural transition, Emerson, Thoreau, Lowell, Whittier, and others. In the later years Thoreau perhaps more than any other engrossed him, and his published work had chiefly to do with the elucidation and defence of that singular genius.

Along with his passion for great writings that lifted him above the sordid earth, and gave him comfort and hope in life, went the passion of a book lover. And so he became a book collector. He delighted in bringing together on his own shelves the original editions of his favorite authors and all illustrative matter bearing on them. The successful quest of these treasures gave him exquisite pleasure. The fly leaves of his books contain many valuable bibliographical notes on the history of these "finds." He loved to entertain his friends with accounts of his triumphs in this field, and on occasion would set out a friendly glass in celebration of some special event. He was a captivating raconteur, and his library was a privileged resort of the lovers of books, old and young. He specially welcomed the visits of the young people of the University who sought his aid and advice in their literary researches. By special invitation he gave many talks before the Literary societies of the University and the classes in literature.

After his death (March 9, 1912) the University made overtures to the family for the purchase of the Carlyle Collection en bloc. Dr. Jones's wish that this particular collection, which had cost so much patient labor, should not be dispersed, was well known; and satisfactory terms were readily agreed upon. The entire collection now rests securely upon the shelves of the General Library, where it will be open for the use of scholars for the generations to come—in perpetuum.

Chartism. By Thomas Carlyle ... London, J. Fraser, 1840.

2 p. l., 113 p. 20½ cm.

"Written in 1839 as a magazine article, but Lockhart dared not print it. J. S. Mill desired to do so in the Westminster, but Carlyle's wife and his brother John did not deem it advisable."—J., citing Froude, Life in London, v. 1, p. 171 sq.

1st issue was in "some four sheets making a Pamphlet," late in December, 1839. Carlyle wrote Emerson, 6 January, 1840, "The pamphlet itself (or rather booklet, for Fraser has gilt it, &c., and asks five shillings for it as a Book) is out since then." On 17 January, 1840, he wrote "Fraser is striking off another One Thousand copies to be called Second Edition." (cf. Correspondence of Carlyle and Emerson, 1834-1872. Boston, 1883. v. 1, p. 261, 265.) (J)

Chartism. By Thomas Carlyle ... Second edition. London, J. Fraser, 1840.

2 p. l., 113 p. 20½ cm.

"A reprint demanded by the interest taken in the Chartist movement. Evidently the type of the first issue has not been distributed."—J. (J) Chartism. By Thomas Carlyle ... Second edition. London, Chapman and Hall, 1842.

2 p. l., 113 p. 20 cm.

"Remainder sheets of the 2d English ed. were bought by Chapman & Hall and issued with new title page in 1842."—J. (J)

VI. MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS

Articles in the Edinburgh encyclopædia.

"List of authors" (v. 1, p. [ix]–xiv) attributes the following articles to Carlyle: v. 14.—*Montaigne, Michel de, p. 657–659; *Montagu, Lady Mary Wortley, p. 659–661; *Montesquieu, Charles de Secondat, Baron of, p. 661–664; Montfaucon, Bernard de, p. 664–665; Moore, Dr. John, p. 671–672; Moore, Sir John, p. 672.—v. 15.—*Necker, Jacques Baron de, p. 316–320; Nelson, Horatio Viscount, p. 320–324; *Netherlands, p. 329–339; Newfoundland, p. 347–351; Norfolk, p. 366–370; Northamptonshire, p. 370–373; Northumberland, p. 373–377.—v. 16.—Park, Mungo, p. 315–319; *Pitt, William, Earl of Chatham, p. 604–608; *Pitt, Willam, p. 608–612.

Of the above articles the first six are signed T. C., the remaining ten being unsigned. Those marked* are reprinted in the Centenary edition, Critical and miscellaneous essays.

The article on Montucla (v. 14, p. 670–671) signed T. C. has also been attributed to Carlyle by John Muir. (cf. Notes and queries, ser. 8, v. 4, 1893, p. 246.)

"The fourteenth volume has at the end the imprint, 'Edinburgh: printed by Balfour and Clarke, 1820,' and the sixteenth volume, 'Printed by A. Balfour and Co., Edinburgh, 1823; so that Carlyle's papers were presumably written and contributed between these dates.'—S. (J)

Montaigne, and other essays chiefly biographical. By Thomas Carlyle. Now first collected. With foreword by S. R. Crockett. London, J. Gowans & son; Philadelphia, J. B. Lippincott co., 1897.

3 p. l., [ix]–xiv p., 1 l., 297 p. front. (port.) 22½ cm.

These essays were contributed to Brewster's Edinburgh encyclopædia between 1820–1823. The essay on Montucla has not hitherto been noticed by bibliographers, but as it is ... signed T. C. and ... proofs of authorship seem conclusive, it has been deemed advisable to include it as an Appendix.—Publishers' note. (J)

Müller, Friedrich Max

... Goethe and Carlyle. An inaugural address delivered to the Society by the president ... May 28, 1886. London, D. Nutt, 1886.

24 p. 24½ cm. (English Goethe Soc. Publications no. 1)

Reprinted from the Contemporary review, v. 49, 1886.

p. 22: Three articles in v. 1 of the Foreign quarterly review, 1827 (i.e. Ernst Schulze, Hoffmann and German theatre) were attributed to Carlyle by Goethe. Carlyle, however, denied this in a letter to Goethe dated 18th April, 1828, adding "That article on Hoffmann was written by Sir Walter Scott, the two others by young men of this city, one of them Editor of the Work; the other (Schulze's critic) a translator of Wallenstein." Footnotes identify the former of these two as William Fraser, the latter as George Moir. (cf. Correspondence between Goethe and Carlyle. London, 1887, p. 86; also Poole's Index which attributes the first and third articles to R. P. Gillies.)

AUTOGRAPH LETTERS

Chelsea, 24 Oct^r, 1846.

Dear Sir,

Unless Dell is mentioned in Calamy's Abridgement (Catalogue of Divines ejected in 1662), I rather think there will be no express Life of him anywhere discoverable. But he appears frequently in the old Pamphlets; in Baxter's Life are two notices of him, two in Wood's Fasti; and old Sermons of his, preached before the House of Commons, are still to be met with on the Book-stalls, and doubtless in much better condition in the Bodleian Library. I have got one here,—for Monthly Fast-day 26 Nov^r 1646,—on “Reformation of the Church;” which, if at any time you cared to take so much trouble, I could very willingly lend you.

I remain always

Yours sincerely

T. Carlyle. (J)

Mr Miller, who is now about removing to a better post, has served, these last Eight years, in the London Library, as one of the Clerks there; and, I have reason to believe, has proved himself uniformly an amiable, punctual, polite, diligent and intelligent young man; giving great satisfaction to his Employers. Whatever I, for my part, have happened to know of him is to his advantage.

T. Carlyle.
